

Vacancy rates tumbled after the early-2000s housing boom ended

Many economists believe the U.S. needs more vacant houses today, along with more houses for people to live in.

